

Ronald E. Harrison

Ron developed and presents the Teens Using Drugs: What To Know and What To Do series, which has been presented regularly since 1999. Ron is a social worker who has worked in the field of substance abuse since 1971 as a therapist, administrator of substance abuse programs and trainer.

Ron has conducted a private practice in Ann Arbor Michigan since 1983, with a specialty of working with substance-involved adolescents and their families. Ron provides evaluations and therapy for people experiencing problems with substance abuse. In addition, Ron has provided individual and group therapy for individuals with alcohol and drug problems. Ron also works with families of substance abusers to assist them with problems related to the substance abuser.

Ron's past experience includes working with heroin addicts in Cleveland's inner city and providing services to industries through an employee assistance program.

Ron's additional experience includes working in public and private agencies providing clinical supervision, staff training, program development, financial management, and marketing expertise. Ron has also presented papers at numerous national conferences, served on the board of many social service agencies and participated in a White House conference on substance abuse.

In 1999 Ron was asked to present a program on adolescent substance abuse at a local high school. The response to that presentation led to "Teens Using Drugs: What to Know and What To Do". Ron presents this series in other communities upon request.
